

Illinois Program for Research in the Humanities
Women and Gender In Global Perspectives Program
Center for African Studies
Department of Philosophy

Immigration and Collective Ownership of the Earth

Mathias Risse

Professor of Philosophy and Public Policy
Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University

April 11, 2014
3:00 pm
3rd floor, Levis Faculty Center

Risse's book On Global Justice (Princeton: Princeton University Press, 2012) makes the idea of humanity's collective ownership of the earth central and among other topics applies it to immigration. However, this perspective continues to be largely absent from debates about immigration. This paper argues that humanity's collective ownership of the earth should be given more prominence in immigration debates and addresses some important objections that have been raised to that approach.

This event is part of the WGGP Inequality Initiative.

Co-sponsored by: Center for Advanced Study, Service & Justice Outreach, and Inequality Initiative Co-sponsors (College of Agricultural, Consumer & Environmental Sciences; College of Business; College of Liberal Arts & Sciences; Department of Philosophy; International Programs and Studies, MAE Center, School of Literatures, Cultures & Linguistics; and School of Social Work).